Many famous people present at RBES living wax museum

Abe Lincoln was there along with Princess Diana and Anne Frank. Even Manu Ginobili and Cal Ripken Jr. made appearances.

It was all part of Rahe Bulverde Elementary School's third-grade wax museum on May 18.

Students chose subjects that contributed to society, and then researched that person to help them best turn into their historical figure for their wax museum presentations.

"This was something our students were really excited about," said RBES principal Merrie Fox. "It's always great to see them learn something while having a lot of fun in the process."

Here, student Rob Ruff is Babe Ruth mimicking his famous "called" home run shot during the 1932 World Series, and student Hannah Hayes is Ruth Wakefield, the inventor of the Toll House Cookie.
